Edmonton's 55th Exhibition To Be Held July 16 to 21

Very few class A fairs in Western Canada have been in operation annually, continuously, as long as the Edmonton exhibition, which on July 16th will open the gates on the 55th annual fair in that city. The show was first held in two seasons at the Hudson's Bay Company Fort, and later on the fair grounds then located on the river flats, the present grounds being put into use in 1910.

The directors have increased the prize money by approximately 20 per cent over the amount offered last year. The prize list is now available, and a copy will be mailed free, on request. Entries close on June 30th.

It is not possible to mention all the interesting classes. The most outstanding are of course those for horses, cattle, sheep and swine, but great interest is also taken in the competitive classes for grains, and vegetables, flowers, poultry, paintings, needlework, cooking and children's school work. A great effort is being made this year to feature one-farm exhibits, each to include farm produce grown by farmer living on his farm of not less than 40 acres. The class calls for Alberta-grown fruits, fresh or preserved, canned vegetables, table vegetables, seed grain, sheep, cattle, forage plants, home-made cheese and eggs (two of the latter three will answer), and home-cured or canned meats. Quality and variety are the points upon which the award will be made, only 20 out of the 430 points allowed being for arrangement, so that competition in this class is not at all a complicated matter, and the prize money is most liberal, starting with $40 for the first prize.

There are also many other interesting classes, such as butter-making for both girls and adults, for girls who can dress dolls, for boys in caring for colts and for many things which are part of the ordinary life of the average northern Alberta farm home.

As for attractions, there are many outstanding new features to interest and entertain visitors to Northern Alberta's big fair this year. They include a new midway, "The Royal American Shows"—farm tractor races—a television show—and a mechanical iron man weighing 7000 pounds, called "Alpha" the Robot. He smokes, fires a gun, talks and obeys the commands of the human voice. There will be six days of horse races and a startling grand stand production, "The Show of the Century."

The advance sale of tickets at a greatly reduced rate, which was so popular last year, will be repeated this year, and tickets may be purchased from news dealers and postmasters throughout northern Alberta, or you can mail your dollar direct to the ticket committee, Edmonton Exhibition Association, Ltd.

Write for free prize list today as entries close on June 30th, and plan to holiday in Edmonton fair week, July 16th to 21st.

Miss Agnes Craig Died at Edmonton

The death of Miss Agnes Craig, of Irma, occurred at the home of her sister, Mrs. C. H. R. Clarke, 1821 95th street, Edmonton, on June 20th, at the age of 54 years. Miss Craig who had been in poor health for some time, was in Edmonton at the time of her death for medical treatment.

She leaves to mourn her loss, one sister, Mrs. C. H. R. Clarke, and one brother, Peter, in Edmonton, one brother, James, in Irma, and two brothers and three sisters in Scotland. One brother, David, who came to the Irma district from Scotland, pre-deceased her a number of years ago.

The remains were brought back to Irma by train on Friday and the funeral service was held Saturday afternoon in the United Church, Rev. J. R. Geeson officiating.

The floral tributes were very beautiful and were contributed by the following: Bro. James, Isa and family, sister Lizzie, Charlie and Jean Clarke; brother Peter, Margaret and family; brothers and sisters in Glasgow, Scotland Mrs. Graham and Jim; V. Robertson; Mr. C. Brown; Mrs. I. C. Knudson and family; Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Peterson; Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Smith; Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Frickleton; Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Johnson; Mr. and Mrs. J. McLean and family, and Mr. J. Hedley.

The pall-bearers were as follows: Messrs. E. J. Jones, W. Prosser, R. W. Patterson, J. C. McLean, Wm. Walker and C. Brown.

Interment took place in the Irma cemetery.

Viking Items

After repeated efforts on the part of the Viking District Chamber of Commerce and others, it seems that the main highway from Holden to Irma will at least have a coat of gravel this year. Contracts for this work is being called for by the department of public works and will be closed on Friday of this week.

E. Frink left on Monday evening for Montreal where he expects to meet his fiancée, Miss Ivy Teasdale, who arrives this week from Longtown, Cumberland England. They expect to be married in Montreal, on Saturday, June 30th, after which they will return to Viking to make their permanent home.

Rev. Father O'Neill has returned from an extended trip to his home in Prince Edward Island, where he went to see his father who was very ill. His father passed away during his stay.

Rev. and Mrs. Bainbridge and girls are leaving by car on Thursday morning, making several calls enroute, spending Thursday evening in Camrose, and expecting to arrive at Donalds noon Friday.

A family reunion was held at the W. A. Walker farm over the weekend. Among those present from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Sarjent, of Bawif, and Mr. and Mrs. Bridgeman, of Jarow, and several other near and distant friends.

Rev. J. W. Bainbridge delivered his farewell address to congregations at Quinte, Lorneville and Viking, last Sunday. At the evening meeting of the United church, members of the local Masonic order attended in a body. A quartet of the song leaders, Messrs. J. L. Dadds, G. W. Green, V. A. Hardy and P. E. Finch furnished the choir two very excellent selections. The church was filled to hear the message of the pastor who has served the local congregation for the past eight years. He will take charge of the United church at Donalds next Sunday.

Rev. Bainbridge drew many lessons from the main principles of the Masonic order, charity, brotherly love, relief and truth, which ran parallel to the teachings of the Bible. His whole discourse was very ably presented.

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

The services next Sunday will be at Passchendaele, Roseberry and town at the usual hours. The sermon topic will be "An Unusual Conversation."

Perhaps there is one observation one may make as he looks upon the world's life of today. It is that many people no longer have any fear of God. The Psalmist tells us that the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and another Old Testament writer tells us that the whole duty of men is to fear God and keep His commandments. If God is just and holy, we surely have good reason to have some fear. God cannot be false to His own nature, and if we ignore His laws—laws that are the fundamental principles of human life—we must inevitably be the loser. We certainly need to think this matter through to a definite conclusion. If we do, we shall see that this civilization is really a pagan one. It is religion that insists on the high value of the human personality, and it is only as we foster our religious life that we shall grow in the things of the spirit.

The commandments are not easily kept, for there is an inability about us that is very humiliating. The best of us are conscious of wrong-doing, for we do not achieve the perfect obedience that we would like. However, Jesus Christ has a word of saving power for us, because He is the Saviour of men. He will give us the victory over sin, and bring to us a higher knowledge of life. His message for us is "Love God and Do His Will." The real power of the religious life is the saving grace of Jesus Christ.

Lawn Grasses

R. I. Hamilton, of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Ontario, presents the following timely article dealing with lawn grasses:

Based on the results of experiments on the Dominion Experimental Farms, Kentucky blue grass is the most generally suitable grass for lawns in Canada. Sown alone it produces a lawn of good quality, good colour and one which normally can be expected to retain in good condition with the minimum amount of attention. Colonial Bent, sometimes sold as New Zealand Bent, brown top, or Rhode Island Bent is one of the non-creeping Bents, perfectly hardy in Canada, of fine texture and capable of producing exceptionally fine lawns. Colonial Bent, one part, Kentucky blue grass four parts and the mixture sown at a rate of three pounds per 1000 square feet is generally recommended for ordinary lawn purposes.

Grass seed sold under the trade name of creeping Bent, mixed Bent or German mixed Bent is not a creeping Bent at all, but a mixture principally of Colonial Bent with red top and containing small percentages of true creeping Bent types and sometimes velvet Bent. This so-called creeping Bent varies greatly in turf producing qualities depending on the proportion of the different kinds that make up the mixture. White Dutch clover at about one-quarter ounce per 1000 square feet can be added with advantage to the Kentucky blue, Colonial Bent mixture.

Where a particularly fine lawn is desired Colonial Bent or New Brunswick creeping Bent can be used alone or in equal parts, seeding from 2 to 3 pounds per 1000 square feet. New Brunswick creeping Bent produces the dense, even, fine turf desired on putting greens and for those who will give a lawn putting green attention this type of Bent can be recommended. Creeping Bent, grown from stol-

Buckskin Flats Stampede Well Attended Affair

The attendance at the Buckskin Flats stampede on June 20th was very good. A splendid line of contestants were pulled off, and some very expert riders took part, giving the spectators plenty of thrills for their money.

The following are some of the contestants with the names of the winners: Saddle Riding—1st, J. Wade; 2nd, D. Bruce; 3rd, U. Dean.
Loose Rope Riding—1st, J. Ambler; 2nd, N. Doan; 3rd, C. Jackson.
Steer Riding—(professional)—1st, D. Bruce; 2nd, H. Burke; 3rd, N. Doan.

Steer Riding—(amateur)—1st, F. Armstrong; 2nd, Whitford; 3rd, P. Prosser.

Wild Horse Race—1st, M. Reynolds; 2nd, D. Bruce.

Calf Roping—1st, H. Myers; 2nd, J. House.

Maverick race—1st, H. Myers.

Wild Cow Milking—1st, C. Glover; 2nd, S. Sisson.

In the baseball games the Red Stars won first honors; Rockford, 2nd, and Coal Springs 3rd.

Myers, of Wainwright, had about one hundred of his best horses at this stampede.

ons is not recommended at all for ordinary lawns. Velvet Bent of which a limited quantity is grown in the Maritime provinces produces an exceptionally beautiful lawn, but should only be used where extra care can be taken in maintaining it.

Where drought conditions are particularly severe, as in many parts of the prairie provinces, created wheat grass is the only grass for lawns which will survive. Without water during drought periods, it does dry out, but unlike other grasses suitable for lawns, it recovers quickly when moisture is available and will give excellent results where other grasses are complete failures. Red fescue of which there are two types on the market, ordinary and creeping, gives fair results under dry conditions, but does best when moisture is present. Both types must be maintained as a very thick sod otherwise their bunching habits produces undesirable turf. Red top will produce a good quality lawn, but the surface is only a temporary one, which, at best can be expected to persist for only one or two years after seeding. For shady places rough stalked meadow grass, wood meadow grass or sheep's fescue can be sown alone or in a mixture with Kentucky blue and Bent grass.

OCCASIONAL WIFE

By
EDNA ROBB WEBSTER
Author of "Joretta," "Lipstick Girl" etc.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla, Hoyt, and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to provide for her. After a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money when she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter. Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarrelled. After a party at an exclusive club, when the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the party, Peter and Camilla slip off to the beach by themselves and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This makes it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Peter urges Peter to accept some of her earnings to help him along, but Peter refuses and they quarrel. After Camilla has gone from the studio, Avis Werth calls and persuades Peter to accept a loan of $1,000. Peter finishes his exhibit, and asks Avis to Camilla for suggestions as to a name for it. Camilla suggests "Eager Youth," and Avis "Inspiration." Peter suggests the latter, and Camilla, heartily goes to Peter's studio for quiet and to think. Peter and Avis follow later, and as the lights are turned on, see the statue has been shattered to pieces. Avis accuses Camilla of doing this, and Camilla, stunned by the disaster and hurt and horrified by the accusation, faints.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XLVIII

Long silences and hollow, brief remarks, like those which fill a house where death has passed, prolonged that seemingly endless night for Camilla and Peter. Neither of them slept. There was little to be said. Only their separate thoughts labored in a ceaseless turmoil and gained them nothing.

If it had been a problem to solve, a difficult decision to be made, it would have been different. But a thousand sleepless nights and all the thoughts of their lifetime could not efface this tragic thing that had come between them.

Camilla's tired eyes watched the windows being transformed into squares of gray patches with the approach of dawn, and the familiar objects in the room emerge from dark blot into definite shapes. The empty turn-stand mocked her deviously and despoiled her pain. For contrast, the modeled group in the window stood out sharply and proudly against the background of daylight.

If something had to happen to Peter's work, why couldn't it have been that piece which had been broken? It would have grieved her to lose it, but not like this! Over and over, she had wondered how the thing could have happened. It didn't seem possible that it could have been an accident from some natural cause. No, it appeared to be a deliberate act. But who could have hated Peter like that? It was almost funny that anyone could believe she had done it—least of all Peter.

MINARD'S
"KING OF PAIN"
LINIMENT
W. N. U. 2051

Not if he had flirted with a dozen girls and broken her heart, could he have done so terrible a thing for revenge. No, never. She loved Peter so much that she would do anything in the world for him. Then why should she be so revengeful? He had done her no harm, but she was so attracted to him, to whom he felt obligated for some reason? He probably exaggerated that duty in his own mind because he always was doing kind things for other people. Avis had managed somehow to make him believe he owed her his gratitude.

Camilla had known all the time that Avis' sole purpose in taking that studio across the hall had been to influence Peter in her favor. Why any woman should so exert herself to take another woman's husband, she didn't know. And wondered if, loving Peter as she did, he belonged to another, she would still make such an effort to win him. She did not. She was fair enough to admit that one never knew who one would do in another's circumstances.

No use to analyze all that now. Peter's loss was irrevocable. She would have to comfort him as he would permit her, and help him to revive his hopes and dreams. She would gently lead him back to the beginning again, like those brave figures he had portrayed in the sculpture he had made for her. Gazing at it again, its beauty and significance struck her so forcibly that she sat up quickly with a little gasp.

Peter, whose eyes had been closed but not sleeping, looked at her quickly.

"Peter, I have an idea," she exclaimed, and her face brightened rapidly.

"Well?" he prompted listlessly.

"You must enter your immigrant group in the exhibit. Looking at it in the dim light of the room and framed in the brighter background of light from the window, I just now realized how wonderful it really is."

"If it took the judges that long to discover how good it is, I might win the prize in another ten years," he snorted.

"But, dear, even if you don't win, wouldn't it be better to enter something as good as that?"

"If I can't enter a piece that I believe has some chance at least, I'll stay out."

"But it would have a chance. I know it would. If for no other reason, just because of the opinions of most exhibit entries. Won't you please try it?" she pleaded.

He moved his head to one side, negatively. "It's no use. Forget it. Perhaps next year."

"Peter, you have to do it," she insisted gently. "You might even pretend that you planned to use that one all the time and were only using the other figure for sale."

"To protect you?" he mumbled.

"Oh," she cried, wounded deeply. "Then you do believe what Avis said!"

"It isn't what I think. It's what all the others think who were here, and what they will say."

"Oh, no, Peter. I am sorry if any of them believe that I could be so cruel—but it's what you think—woefully. How can you?"

"I don't say I did," he denied bluntly. "I only said that what you suggested would protect you against what the rest might think. That would be the only reason I might enter the thing, for a blind."

He believed that she had done this cruel thing to him, and still wanted to protect her from the opinions of others. What could he do? He was sure, to be sure. Well, if he wanted to be so noble, let him. She was positive that his entering the group would be to his honor and credit.

Which was what he agreed to do in the end. When Camilla left him to go to the office, he had promised to carve the words, "Land of Hope," on the plinth beneath the little group, and enter it in the National exhibition as if that had been his first intention.

Others might believe that, but not Avis. When he explained his intention to her, he added casually, "As a matter of fact, I didn't know which piece I would enter. Now it's all settled. Matter of elimination. I had an idea from the first that I might not use the nude."

"You never can make me believe that, Peter Anson, but it's terribly sporting of you to take the chance," she told him with frank admiration.

"Don't you think it will have a chance?"

"I doubt it. You had the right idea when you made the other for the exhibit. It was the usual kind of stuff."

"It might be the unusual thing that will attract attention, then," he tried to sound convincing, but did not believe what he said, himself.

Of course, he had other things that he had done during his work at school and at the museum, but nothing else.

FALSE TEETH

Dr. WERNER'S POWDER

Dr. Werner's Powder holds false teeth so firmly and comfortably in place for 24 hours—they actually feel natural—eat, laugh, sing without fear of any slipping. Prescribed by world's most eminent dentists—they keep the best—just sprinkle on. Inexpensive—any drugstore.

Important enough to consider for entry in the exhibit.

With the revival of his hopes, Avis glimpsed a faint possibility for her own, and immediately sponsored the new idea. She insisted upon serving him a hearty breakfast and then driving him to the museum with the piece of sculpture.

"Do you think I would take a chance on your tripping with your last and only hope, and breaking that?" she attempted to jest.

But his mood was not responsive. He was doing this thing more for Camilla's sake than anything. Just why, he did not know. Perhaps in memory of those first hours they had had together when life and love had lavishly promised them so much, and there had been no thought of doubts and misunderstanding.

As Peter had predicted, there were more entrants than usual. Improvised students competed for that privilege which would solve so many present difficulties for them, as well as others who sought the distinction and various advantages which the winning of such a prize would tender them. And, as he had expected, nude figures in innumerable symbolic poses predominated. In fact, there were few who had ventured anything else.

There were a number of weird contrivances after the modern vogue, a few busts of prominent or historic characters, some animal and bird presentations. Fountains and garden pieces constituted the artistic majority, and Peter wished mightily that his youthful figure was added to their number. He might have had a chance, then. It had been good, better than most of them, and he believed it might have compared with the best of them.

He hesitantly declined to accept Avis' suggestion that they pass the afternoon at a matinee or do something to take his mind from his work, and wandered about aimlessly for awhile before he returned to the studio and the suspense of awaiting the outcome. That suspense did not concern him so much now, but he was anxious to know what his own misfortune might have favored.

Have Seadog For Pet

Boys In St. John, N.B., Planning To Teach Him Tricks

Two boys who caught a seadog on the Bay of Fundy shore at West Saint John, N.B., are planning to teach him tricks.

The young amphibian knows when to expect food, and three times a day, just before meal hour, he startles the neighbourhood with strange barking. Then the boys have to go fishing to satisfy their captive's appetite. They also feed him milk through a nipple on a baby bottle.

After keeping the seadog in a garage for one day the boys returned it to the water and watched it swim away. Early the next morning, however, it was waiting for them on the beach below their house and followed them home like an affectionate, although somewhat suspicious, dog. Sometimes it goes swimming following the family rowboat, but never deserts its new pals.

The friendly canine canine, which enjoys frequent baths in a tub near the garage, is about three feet long and has a head resembling the ordinary dog. Dragging the hind flippers, it can walk almost as fast as its human companions. Since the pet refuses to go away, the boys are planning to teach him tricks.

A preacher in New Jersey, as he looked over his large congregation on Easter Sunday morning, said: "I realize that there are many here who will not be with us again until next Easter time. I take this opportunity of wishing them a Merry Christmas."

A Marvel Of Architecture

Palace Of Arts In Mexico City Cost Ten Million Dollars

Many people look upon Mexicans as a somewhat barbaric people. Like Soviet Russia it is a country of periodical disturbances, but, like the Russians, they are intensely devoted to art, music and the theatre, and in the cities there is a far higher level of culture than in almost any English-speaking community.

After 30 years, the Palace of Arts in Mexico City has just been completed. The building was begun in 1904 during the regime of Porfirio Diaz, and despite frequent political changes each succeeding government has continued the work. There was never any difference of opinion about that. The Palace of Arts is a stupendous structure, housing art galleries, a national museum, a gigantic theatre which is a work of art in itself and the auditorium of which has the most wonderful lighting system ever conceived, an auditorium for concerts, rooms for exhibits, lectures and various other purposes. The building is a marvel of architecture inside and out, covers two city blocks, and cost about $10,000,000.

Neither Great Britain, Canada nor the United States could or would duplicate such a monument to the arts.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Women Detectives Fail

To Be Disbanded In London After Six Months' Trial

Women detectives are a failure. Given a six month trial in detective work, women members of the London police force have brought little beyond their inborn intuition to their work.

According to the Policewoman's Review they have been found wanting in sundry other capacities needed in this type of police work, and are to be disbanded.

In an outspoken editorial on their failure, the Review states:

"Many women who wish to qualify as detectives are always quite certain of their personal capacity and are often unwilling to admit the absolute necessity of training to aid their instinct."

"The average woman is by nature entirely opposed to detective work and we see, in this choice a safeguard to herself and a guarantee that her contribution to police work must be along different lines to those of men."

"We find ourselves unable to consider the disbanding of the women detectives as disastrous."

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

NEW POETS

We know the songs old poets all have made,
How they have painted life's divinest things
In words so splendid, now words are as shade

To sun, as feet to soaring wings
We know how futile any phrase must be
Which follows after perfect speech is said;

Our poems are as moths tossed out to sea,
While theirs are strong gulls wheeling overhead.

In spite of this, who can from song refrain
When it is passion of his every hour?
When courage's veins are poured the lyric strain

Who can keep silence and renounce his power?
We know old poets sung sublimely well,
Yet each new heart has its own tale to tell!

More British Films

English Film Industry Has Greatly Increased Output

The English film industry has quadrupled its production in the past few years, it was revealed recently, and the report pointed out that the quality of the films has led England's movie houses to show twice as many British films as the law requires.

The "boom" in English films has led to a production of an average of 10 films per week, or some 200 for 1934, if the present pace is maintained, as against the former annual averages of 50 to 60.

In Canada the distillery industry provides the largest industrial outlet for surplus rye. Small amounts are used for human, food products while a considerable proportion is fed or otherwise consumed on farms.

Under the hog grading regulations, no carcass grading is authorized at an abattoir until seal and equipment for grading have been approved by the Dominion Minister of Agriculture.

Almost Instant Relief From Neuralgia

Now comes amazingly quick relief from headaches, rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia... the fastest safe relief, if it is not yet discovered.

Those results are due to a scientific discovery by which an Aspirin Tablet begins to dissolve, or disintegrate, in the amazing space of two seconds after touching moisture. And hence to start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass, here, tells the story. An Aspirin Tablet starts to disintegrate almost instantly you swallow it. And thus is ready to go to work almost instantly.

When you buy, though, be on guard against substitutes. To be sure you get ASPIRIN's quick relief, be sure the name Bayer in the form of a cross is on every tablet of Aspirin.

For Quick Relief Say ASPIRIN When You Buy

WHY ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

Drop an Aspirin Tablet in a glass of water. Note that BEFORE it touches bottom, it has started to disintegrate.

What it does in this glass it does in your stomach. Hence its fast action.

Prairie Fruit Orchards

Scientific Fruit Breeding Of Great Assistance To West

The scientist is coming to the aid of the prairie settler in enlarging the variety and increasing the volume of home-grown fruits for his table. The work of the scientist in other fields of agricultural production is, of course, already widely recognized.

Marquis wheat, originated by Dr. Saunders at the Canadian Government Experimental Farm at Ottawa, has combined adaptation to a short season with such milling qualities, has literally rolled the map of agricultural areas northward. More recent scientific achievements seem likely to master the wheat scourge known as rust. While these and similar developments have occupied public attention, persistent and successful work has been carried on in adapting or creating varieties of fruit suitable to the prairie soil and climate. It is now predicted that if scientific fruit breeding continues at the present rate of progress, within the next twenty years the Western prairies will have a range of fruits approximately equal in quality to those now grown in the principal fruit-growing areas of Canada.

In their natural condition the Canadian prairies produce wild fruits in considerable variety. The delicious strawberry is native to very large areas. Raspberries, gooseberries, currants, cranberries, saskatoons and plums grow wild in many localities. Apples were introduced many years ago and varieties have been developed which do well under prairie conditions. Already any farmer who can grow wheat can have a considerable variety of fruits, and with scientific fruit breeding it is predicted that this variety will be increased.

Trophy In Dublin Museum

One Of Last Scalps Taken By Manitoba Sarcee

A black tuft of hair lifted from the head of a Gros Ventres warrior by a Sarcee Indian brave and one of the last scalps taken by Manitoba's dusky aborigines, rests under a glass case in the Dublin museum to-day, a concrete reminder to Irishmen that the Canadian west was once wild and woolly.

Ex-Mounted Police Constable Frank Dobbs, Shoal Lake pioneer, purchased the scalp in 1870 from Sarcee Indians of the Lizard Point reserve. He met them returning from their last brush with the Gros Ventres, an American band, and bought the scalp lock for a sack of flour. Afterwards, while visiting his home in Ireland, he presented the trophy to the Dublin museum.

Admiral Fitzroy Evolved System Seventy-Three Years Ago

The first official storm warning was printed by daily papers just seventy-three years ago. And how the scoffers scoffed when it proved accurate! The official responsible for such a daring commitment was Admiral Fitzroy, who, as first director of the Meteorological Department, then under the control of Board of Trade, deserves to be remembered as the father of the weather forecast.

He evolved the system of collecting and collating reports from a number of scattered sources. Where as the modern forecaster is kept in touch with conditions all over the world, he received but five reports from abroad, and these were usually a day or two late! Fitzroy came to an untimely end; overwork drove him to suicide in April, 1865. He left behind him a mass of valuable data on weather observations at sea.

Deadly snake venom has been found useful in the treatment of several diseases.

Mentally, some men and women never grow old, no matter how many years they have to their credit.

A Farmers' Journal

After 40 years of publication exclusively as a farmers' journal, The Weekly Sun, formerly The Farmers' Sun, will become an urban weekly with a rural edition, it was announced at Toronto. The paper has been taken over by Graham Spry, vice-president of the Ontario Council of the Commonwealth Co-operative Federation.

The Alps are believed to have risen from a seaway four to seven times their present width.

Succumbs on Train

While returning from a visit to Edmonton together with her husband, Mrs. Wm. Candler, aged 72, of the Kinsella district, passed away on a passenger train when it was running between Viking and Phillips at 9:50 a.m. Saturday morning last.

She had complained of feeling ill and asked Mr. Candler to bring a drink of water, which she took, and then she lapsed and died. The crew backed the train to Viking where the body was removed to the Hennessy funeral parlors Dr. Haverth corner, F. Miller, R.C.M.P., were called, and decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

The body was prepared for burial and taken to Kinsella the following day.

"What do you intend to make of your boy when he grows up," asked a visitor of a young couple who had just been blessed with their first born. "Well, we thought of making a doctor of him, but we are afraid he will become a politician," they replied. "What makes you think that?" asked the visitor. "Well, he wriggles out of everything," they replied.

Election Results in Ontario and Saskatchewan

The election results in Ontario and Saskatchewan last Tuesday were surprising to many who had followed the campaign as outlined in the press during the past few weeks. Opinions were expressed freely that the C.C.F. candidates had a fairly good chance to win a number of seats in Saskatchewan, but their overwhelming defeat in not capturing a single seat in the province where the movement was cradled is an indication that the rank and file of Canadians do not want socialization of their homes, lands, farms, business, and commercial interests.

A man's home is his castle and he does not relish the idea of turning his sacred possessions into the hands of the state and be bullied about by political adventurers.

The big guns of the C.C.F. movement assisted by members of the C.C.F.-Brownlee government campaigned in Saskatchewan for days and weeks, but the electors voiced their disapproval in no uncertain terms. The Ontario voters did the same, only one C.C.F. making the grade.

The C.C.F.-Brownlee government went to the count in four years at the last election 1926-30. There is every reason why they should follow the same procedure now in 1934, resign and give the electors of this province the same chance that was given electors in Ontario and Saskatchewan.
